The Lolas E. Halverson Motor Development Young Investigator Award

An international honor, the Lolas E. Halverson Motor Development Young Investigator Award is given in recognition of an outstanding young scholar for their contributions to research in the motor development field and scholarly effort to improve motor behavior over the lifespan. Honorees must demonstrate sustained scholarship that makes a significant contribution to the field of motor development. Evidence might include the innovative nature of the work, its impact on the field, and/or its impact on the practical application of knowledge. The recipient will make a research presentation at the next I-MDRC conference.

Nomination Due by March 1 (11:59 pm ET)

Award Criteria:

1. Nominee shall have demonstrated sustained scholarship makes a significant contribution to the field of motor development. Evidence of this distinction might include the innovative nature of the work, its impact on the field, and/or its impact on the application of knowledge. The work shall reflect high quality scholarship as demonstrated by a theoretical rationale and alignment, high quality methods and analyses, insightful interpretation of results, and the contribution of new knowledge to the field of motor development.
2. The nominee must be a current I-MDRC member and preference will be given to individuals who have been actively engaged in I-MDRC (e.g., attending international and national I-MDRC conferences, being a member of I-MDRC over multiple years, serving on I-MDRC committee).
3. Nominees must be no more than 5 years beyond their Ph.D. award date.
4. The award will be presented on biennial basis. The award recipient will receive a plaque at the I-MDRC conference. The recipient will agree to make a research presentation at the next I-MDRC conference.
